A Tribute to Pope Francis By: Greg Monteclaro

Pope Francis passed away on Easter Monday.

It wasn't an accident. It was a divine whisper. As if he waited for the Alleluia-waited for the Church to rejoice one last time-before quietly stepping into the promise he had spent his life proclaiming.

He didn't just die after Easter. He died into it. That timing was his final act of love.

Because his whole life had always followed a different rhythm-Not the rhythm of power, protocol, or pride-But the rhythm of mercy.

So yes, we mourn. But we remember.

We remember the Pope who made us believe again-In a Church that kneels beside the wounded.

In a Gospel that welcomes the doubter. In a God who still walks with us, even through the darkest valleys.

We remember that sainthood is not perfection-it's presence.

That faith is not a prize-it's a light we pass on. That love-real love-leaves a trail of healing behind it.

Pope Francis didn't just lead us. He knelt with us. He wept with us.

He believed for us, when we struggled to believe at all. He waited for Easter-because he believed in the promise.

And now, that promise is his.
